

The first line of this paragraph starts two ems in from the edge, and every line after it starts at the edge itself.

The indent is inherited from the containing block rather than declared here, so this paragraph is indented too.

A negative indent hangs the first line outside the content box, and leaves the rest of the paragraph where it was.

An indent narrows the first line rather than shifting it, so a centred line is centred in what is left.